

Registration Day

Today the flower of the land present themselves for service in the cause of liberty, peace and democracy for the world.

Every man stands ready to do his part in the great struggle. Every mother, wife, sister and daughter of those who are called joins sadly, yet willingly, in the sacrifice entailed.

Shall we who are not called or cannot go with-hold our support? Nay, verily! We will emulate their noble example by providing the "sinews of war"—the money needed to purchase the multitudinous munitions of every sort. We will not view the matter from the standpoint of personal profit. We will not figure how much we can make out of the Liberty Loan Bonds paying 3½% on December and June fifteenth each year. No! Rather, we will figure how we can wisely use the amount of available cash we have to provide the government with the greatest amount of financial power.

We have bond subscription blanks and will gladly confer with you about the best plan of financing them.

RESUMES TESTIMONY AT RAILWAY STRIKE HEARING

Vice President Ham Tells of Re-Employment of Motorman Who Figured in Accident.

When the Senate special committee investigating the street railway strike assembled at 9:30 this morning the committee members were prepared for an all-day session.

William F. Ham, vice president of the company, resumed the stand and recited the facts in the case of a motorman who had been dismissed in 1914 for causing a rear-end collision on the Glen Echo line in which thirty people were injured. The motorman was subsequently employed by the company, and was given re-employment in any capacity, as he was the support of his mother and sister, giving a place as switchman at about $1.50 a day. The witness said the man while serving as motorman had a number of accidents. He was given re-employment because of his sixteen years' service as a motorman.

Counsel Vahey, for the men, sharply cross-questioned the witness as to the details of the accident, showing that the cars were running on a headway of two or three minutes and that the night was foggy.

Old Employee Testifies.

William M. Disney, an employee at the Brightwood barns, told of how he was asked to join the Amalgamated Association. He had paid his dollar, but had not attended a meeting, nor joined the union. He said John W. Cain had told him before the strike that the union would call out all the employees of the road and power houses and put the barns in darkness.

Disney, who is an inspector of brakes, said he did not go on strike and that when he went to his car out for service he found that nearly all of them had been disabled or tampered with in various ways so that they were unworkable until repaired.

He told of cars coming back during the strike, and of a car coming back out and he had picked up a bucket of stones on one car when a stone came through both glass windows.

Signed Individual Contract.

Counsel Vahey cross-questioned the witness as to his service "on and off" since 1914, including the occasions when he was separated from the company and the details attending and succeeding those periods in his service.

Disney said that he had signed an individual contract with the company, and that he had been working for the company since the strike.

Witness Called an "Old Bat."

Witness said he had been called an "old bat" since he came to the hearing by a man named Anderson then in the room.

Upon demand of Counsel Hoover that the man stand up, a man in the rear of the room stood up and was identified by the witness as the one who had called him "an old bat."

Senator Pittman admonished all present that such occurrences would not be tolerated.

Counsel Vahey agreed with the committee. Later the witness said he thought Anderson did not mean anything hurtful in the expression and that they are good friends. Witness said he had ceased to take seriously the epithets applied to him. Witness had no complaint to make against any of the union conductors who had worked with him on his car after the strike of 1916.

Hounded to Go Into Union.

John A. Bowers, a motorman for thirteen years, said he worked through both strikes. He said that he had been hounded to go into the union, but had refused; that he didn't propose to appropriate any of his wages for highly paid organizers to "spout off."

He reiterated many statements about conditions on the road brought out in previous testimony.

The witness spoke of the union men who were "out of a job," sitting around the hearing room, while the highly paid labor organizers had their salaries regularly. Witness said that but for efforts to organize the union all the men would have had a raise of pay a year ago.

William H. Glasscock, a conductor, told of some conditions on the road as recited by others. Union leaders had said that they intended to "run President King out of town," and the men who didn't join the union would have to go, too.

Fired at With Rifle.

He told of being fired upon with a rifle, the bullet passing close to his head, "which hurt his feelings," he added. He had also been "rocked" and threatened with "having his head knocked off."

"I have been called a 'rotten scab' by an Italian sitting right in this room now," said the witness. "When the strikers fought in 1916, for this country, I think it is a shame that I can't walk around without being called down that way."

"Thank you, I am not Italian," said a dark-skinned young man, rising in the room. He was a Syrian, it turned out.

The committee then took a recess until 2:15.

SCIENTISTS SEE MR. REDFIELD.

The Anglo-French scientific mission, in this country to study scientific problems affecting the war, called on Secretary Redfield yesterday. Headed by Sir Ernest Rutherford, one of England's foremost scientists, it will remain in this country about three weeks. An American mission corresponding to it is now abroad.

Accompanied by Dr. S. W. Stratton, chief of the bureau of standards, the mission visited the government departments yesterday.

PRINCE UDINE'S FEVER REPORTED AS ABATING

Head of Italian Mission Recovering From Attack of Illness—His Colleagues in Conference.

The condition of the Prince of Udine, head of Italy's last mission, whose sudden illness yesterday indefinitely postponed the mission's tour of the south and middle west, was reported today to have improved considerably.

The high fever has fallen nearly four degrees, and it is expected that he will be able to leave his bed within two or three days. His physician, Dr. Salvatore Florio, has advised him against taking any part in the work of the mission for the remainder of this week.

Official Bulletin Issued.

An official bulletin, issued by Dr. Florio at noon, reads:

"The Prince of Udine today showed some improvement from yesterday. The conditions of the tonsils remain unchanged, but his temperature has fallen to 100.8. The pulse is 78. His general condition is satisfactory."

The prince's temperature yesterday was 101.

The other members of the commission, with the exception of Senator Marconi, who left here today for New York, where he will receive an honorary degree of doctor of science at Columbia University tomorrow, plan a conference this afternoon with representatives of the government with a view to the completion of their work this week.

Additional Loan in View.

The principal questions to be taken up, it is understood, are another 100,000,000 loan from the United States, the acceleration of the transportation of munitions and foodstuffs, in Italy and the decisive settlement of the status of Italian aliens in this country for the duration of the war.

In the latter case the mission will arrive at some sort of agreement with the Italian government in this country to remain here in the capacity of agricultural laborers.

Guglielmo Marconi Rates

Messages From Airplanes Great Telegraphic Feat

The greatest accomplishment of wireless telegraphy during the present war has been the use of Guglielmo Marconi, who yesterday gave his first interview to newspapermen since he arrived in this country with the Italian war commission.

Witness has transformed artillery action and has been invaluable to the Italian army. Senator Marconi declared, he said that magic things might be expected in the future because of the phenomenal progress made in the last few years.

The inventor explained that the wireless works well from airplanes because the radius is short and communication easy. He said that a plane now can remain over a battlefield and report back to the commanding officer the exact spot where a shot hits, thus fixing the gunner's range. Thus every unit on an extended battle-front also can keep in close touch with every other unit.

He stated that "jamming," or interfering with messages is not so common, because it was found that if one side adopts these tactics the other retaliates, and neither side gains.

Senator Marconi described how officers can sit in England and listen to German field stations in the Turkish armies in Palestine. It is hard to say whether the wireless will help to solve the submarine problem, he stated, and he knows of no invention that will afford perfect protection against the U-boat.

"The submarine would lose much of its effectiveness without wireless apparatus," he said. "It must communicate with its base to get orders. But a submarine, while submerged, cannot use wireless; it must come to the surface to catch the air waves."

FOR PASSAGE OF FOOD LAWS.

Federal-Employees' Union Committee to Urge Congress.

A committee, composed of Cornelia P. Lyne of the Department of Agriculture, E. D. Atkinson of the Post Office Department, J. V. Hamilton of the Interior Department, H. W. Warner of the War Department and F. M. Barnes of the Treasury, has been appointed from the Federal Employees' Union to urge on Congress the necessity for passage of the various food supply measures now pending. The committee was named by President H. M. McLean of the union on authorization of the board of representatives.

Following is formal organization the committee formulated plans for enlisting all possible support for the food control bills and to enlist the aid of federal employees as well as those outside the government service to the end of insuring the enactment of the measures into law as speedily as possible. Resolutions adopted by the board of representatives of the union, reciting the necessity for stringent food control legislation and calling on the American Federation of Labor to aid the Federal Employees' Union in its fight, have been sent to practically all members of Congress.
